While Mr. Honeyman's motion concerned itself primarily with Mrs. Honeymans guardianship, it included also the temporary decision handed down by Surrogate Pelletreau, denying Mr.
La Chance and Mr. Taylor letters of administration of the estate of Jean Stewart, infant sister of Mrs. Honeyman, who died last October. The letters of administration were issued instead to Mr. Honeyman sr. and the Suffolk County National Bank.

Chips of the old block in boxing, cycling, billiards, baseball, tennis and track athletics are shown in the Magazine Section of to-morrow's Tribune. There is young Bobbie Walthour, who follows in his father's tireprints; young Bob Fitzsimmons, who is cultivating the old Bob punch; young Bernie Wefers, who inherits his parent's speed on the cinder path. And this is just a beginning. "Be a champion or nothing," said Wizard Schaefer to Young Jake, his son, and Young Jake is now what his father was-a billiard champion. And for

theater fans. James L. Ford on First-Nights

The author of "Forty-Odd Years in the Literary Shop" writes delightfully and in detail of great plays and great players. Sitting in with Mr. Ford's well-indexed memory is a pleasant session for present-day playgoers as well as for old-timers. In another vein, Arthur Chapman writes of -An Alderman to Every City Block

The proposed increase of aldermanic salaries to $5,-000 makes Mr. Chapman's story of what a City Father does to earn his pay a live one. Not more pay but more aldermen-that's the verdict of the Aldermanic cloak room. The story tells why. Albert Levering illustrates

it. Another illustrated feature is -New York From a Moving "L" Train

Jefferson Machamer continues his weekly series of sketchbook impressions of life in the big and busy town. To-morrow he views it from the second story upward. Comment by his tour-mate, Fairfax Downey. In a different vein is the story of -How the Raisin Was Made to Pay

What co-operation in distribution, advertising and selling did for the raisin growers of California is the subject of a vivid article especially timely in view of "agricultural blocs" and other signs of farm unrest. It is a business romance, the story of the raisin. Something else again is ---

Alone Among Six Million

Helena Smith Dayton tells of the women in New York's vast wilderness whom nobody knows and who know nobody; also, of the queer things they do to pass the time. Ethel Plummer helps with her drawings. These are but a few of the -

Features of the Magazine Section

The rest of the contents ranges from "A Bolshevist Joke and a New Fur War" to a sprightly account of the tussle of New York's hansom cab drivers to hang on in the face of taxi competition. James J. Montague, of course—this week with a bit of whimsical humor that will appeal to every mother, city or suburban. In short, for reading that is readable, see the Magazine Section of -
